TRUCE AGREEMENT IS BELIEVED NEAR

Soon & Heard Around MURRAY

Election fever is getting higher as the summer progresses. George Weeks says it hasn't penetrated the upper-floor of the court house as yet, but that it is evident in the yard outside.

Traffic heavy on South 13th street as school folks drive by a prospective site to visualize the new elementary school building.

In case you are wondering why the street functions are not finished properly where the new paving has been done, it will be fixed up when the second coat is applied to the Hazel highway and Sycamore street.

The man that stops the traffic on the Hazel highway where the paving is being done says that a lot of people get mad because they have to stop and wait for the traffic to clear from the other side.

As far as just plain politeness goes, the two men who stop the traffic are as polite as any we have ever seen.

The six and the two four-year old boys wanted to help clean the house the other day for an expected visitor.

The only trouble was that the place they wanted to clean, the kitchen, had just been cleaned. Also they neglected to tell anybody that they were going to clean it.

They couldn't have made a bigger mess if they had tried, but of course under such circumstances you can't do anything but smile and tell them what a good job they did.

They had several pans of water in the kitchen floor with one or two of them turned over. They used enough soap powder to wash clothes for a week.

Everything in the kitchen was covered with a mixture of soap and soap suds about an inch thick.

The windows were coated with undissolved soap flakes and got hard on the windows.

The floor, the stove, the table, the refrigerator and what have you was covered with water and soap.

Took about an hour to clean up the mess, with more suds rising than we've seen in many a day.

The only bright side of the picture was the fact that they had used only soap and water. After all they could have thrown mud all over the place.

Waited all Spring and up to now for some lilies to come up so we could look at the blooms. Just before the blooms opened, the four year old girl pinched them off the plant. He still doesn't know why he did it.

Breaking the concrete from around a tree on the square. The tree had grown so much that the concrete was bucked out.

The huge oak tree about a half a block off South 12th on Sycamore extended has been cut down.

Littleton is putting up a new sign.

That big hole at the intersection of Third and Main was caused by the plow on a tractor dropping down. Gouged out a big piece of pavement before the man could raise it.

PAMPHLETS AVAILABLE
LOUISVILLE June 5 (UP)—A pamphlet, "To The Home Buying Veteran," now is available at all Kentucky Veterans Administration offices. VA officials have announced today.

The brochure provides information for World War II and Korean veterans interested in buying or building homes under the GI Home Loan Program.

Farmers Harvest Wheat To It From Army Worms

By Staff Writer
Beltsville, Md., research center. Dr. S. E. Dickey, entomologist at the center, said 800 worms had already been captured and inoculated with "polydramal" virus disease. They will be ground up and made into dust spray soon.

The Agriculture Department sympathetic to the farmers' plight was conducting "through studies" to learn if the use of high-powered insecticides like dieldrin on small grain would poison the grain heads and make them dangerous for human consumption.

A decision was expected in a "day or so."

Many farmers, especially in West Virginia, Ohio and Kentucky were harvesting wheat and other grains before they were ripe, save them from the "almost unbelievable" ravages of the army worms.

Agriculture Department experts said they hoped the traditional enemies of the army worm, parasites that kill the hungry hordes, can halt the northward march of the pests.

Experts reported that the corn flea beetle was taking a "serious bite" out of Illinois and Indiana crops. The Department of Agriculture said that Illinois is having the worst outbreak of the tiny, black insect in 20 years.

Several New York Central Railroad trains were delayed in the last few days in the northern part of the state when hordes of tent caterpillars moved over railroad tracks.

The trains could get no traction over the slippery mass of larva.

Elementary pupils will attend sessions each day beginning at nine o'clock and continuing through to twelve. The regular Elementary Training School faculty will teach in the elementary school.

Classes in English, social studies, mathematics, typewriting and others on demand will be offered in high school. The high school schedule will make it possible to earn new credit or to make up deficient work. The regular Training School teachers will teach these classes.

Swimming will be available for those pupils regularly enrolled during the summer term. Buses will make regular trips to transport the pupils for the summer school.

Hopes High That Today's Session Might Be Fruitful

SEOUL, Korea June 5 (UP)—United Nations and Communist delegates meet at Panmunjom today in a truce session that may mean the bloody three-year Korean war is coming to its end.

Reports here, in Tokyo, in Washington and in United Nations headquarters in New York are that the two delegations are within a hair's breadth of agreement on the main outstanding issue.

That issue is the disposition of three Chinese Communist and North Korean prisoners, held by the UN command, who refuse to go home to Red-ruled territory.

The delegates meet 10 p.m. Friday EDT. There is strong hope that the meeting may lead to the signing of an armistice next week, after nearly two years of negotiations.

For the moment the South Koreans, in whose behalf the UN forces are fighting, were evidently the only obstacle to agreement.

Their aged president Syngman Rhee asserted bitterly that agreement with the Communists on the present terms would be "accepting a death warrant."

Rhee urged that the South Korean forces be permitted to drive the Chinese Communists from Korea and then unify their country by conquering the North Koreans.

The 73-year old Korean leader made his plea in a written statement replying to a series of questions submitted by newsmen.

One question asked, "What is the best way to unify Korea if and when an armistice is signed?" He answered:

"The only way I can see is to let the Koreans do their fighting, which they want to do. If they succeed, they will unite under the Republic of Korea government all that want to. It is the national determination."

"If they lose, they will unite under the Communist regime."

The aged South Korean leader expressed his continued opposition to current truce proposals in an exclusive question-and-answer interview with United Press only a few hours before he and Acting Prime Minister Pyun Yung Tae held a crucial meeting with Gen. Mark W. Clark, Supreme United Nations commander-in-chief in the Far East, and American Ambassador Ellis O. Briggs.

Clark flew to Seoul from Tokyo for the vital discussion and left Rhee's mansion one hour and seven minutes later.

Clark refused to discuss his important talks with Rhee on the eve of the resumption of truce conferences at Panmunjom on proposals believed to be acceptable to both the UN and the Communists.

"I have no comment," Clark said.

Rodney Dee Brodie Stars On Television

CHICAGO June 5 (UP)—Rodney Dee Brodie, who was born with his head joined to his Siamese twin and survived the historic operation that separated them, made his television debut in the baseball cap that has become part of his standard costume.

And he flashed the friendly grin that has made him a favorite of nurses and doctors at the University of Illinois Research and Educational Hospital.

The 20-month old appeared on a "live" telecast carried Thursday night by the National Broadcasting Company and supervised by the American Medical Association.

Rodney's moment in the limelight was short. He appeared for not quite two minutes.

Better Not To Hate Yanks, It Helps Their Win Streak

By CARL LUNDQUEST
United Press Sports Writer
NEW YORK June 5 (UP)—Maybe it would be better not to hate the Yankees.

The White Sox tried to stir up hate by saying the umpires favored the Yankees. General Manager Frank Lane openly challenged some decisions and protests went all the way to league President

Curt Simmons.
Philadelphia Phillies officials estimated today that star southpaw Curt Simmons, injured in a freak accident with a power lawn mower will be unable to pitch for three weeks.

The ace lefty, who has won seven games and lost four, was hurt
Thursday when he was overturning the mower on the front lawn of his home in suburban Woodrow-brook. According to his wife, Mary, Simmons pulled the mower up a slope and suffered a skid and fell back when his foot became caught in the mower.

Simmons' wife took him by auto
to Abington Memorial Hospital, where doctors said he would have to stay "a day or so."

Dr. Calvin T. Smythe said Simmons "ought to be able to pitch in about two weeks. He'll be all right."

Kiner Anxious To Work With Hank Sauer

By RALPH KINER
As Told To The United Press
PITTSBURGH June 5 (UP)— I'm anxious now to team up with that Hank Sauer who tied with me last year for the home run lead in the National League.

I'm anxious to see what we can do now that we're going to be together.

You know, the first inning I had of the trade was Wednesday night when one of the club officials came up and told me I looked like I was going to Chicago.

Actually, I knew all the while that I would be traded sometime—ever since Branch Rickey came here as general manager. I don't say that in a derogatory way—I merely mean that I'm not Rickey's type of ball player. He likes them young and fast.

I am remorseful in leaving Pittsburgh which I have come to know as my home. I would have been great to hit a home run out there yesterday. I was trying for the long one but couldn't quite get it.

But today was just like any other game and a home run feels good anytime.

As long as I had to be traded,
I'm glad I was sent to the Chicago Cubs. Chicago is a wonderful city and I think the fans there are great. I like to play in Wisconsin Field too.

As I've said many times before, the people in Pittsburgh have treated me wonderfully. I have made many friends here and I honestly regret leaving them.

My wife and I have talked this over and she is pleased although she also regrets leaving Pittsburgh. But she always has liked Chicago.

I sincerely hope the Pirates make the top brace. We lost the players and Manager Fred Haney deserve it.

In baseball, you must take the batter with the glove. I don't think playing with Chicago will be better.

Although Chicago is a good baseball town. And one thing that makes me glad is that there I won't have to play so many night games.

Some Women's Minds Are Pregnancy Protection

By DELOS SMITH
United Press Science Editor
NEW YORK (UP)—Doctors told doctors today that 1. the minds of some women protect them against pregnancy by making them sterile, 2. the champion antiseptic chemical, silicone, can bounce off other chemicals which harm the skin, and 3. there is no completely satisfactory pill for high blood pressure but there are two drugs which help.

The doctors were among more than a score who addressed scientific sessions at the 102nd annual meeting of the American Medical Association.

Dr. William S. Kroger, assistant professor of obstetrics and gynecology at the Chicago Medical School, mentioned psychosomatic infertility in women and added that the female mind "has also been implicated in the early and late toxemias of pregnancy."

"Such entities may, in part, be due to the stress of modern living," he said. "For instance, nausea and vomiting of pregnancy are seldom seen in the stoic Oriental. Yet, when these same races become Westernized, or acculturated, these conditions appear."

Dr. Raymond R. Suskind, associate professor of dermatology and syphilology, University of Cincinnati College of Medicine, made up a cream with 52.5 per cent liquid silicone and the remainder inert clay. He had 146 workers whose jobs brought them into contact with chemical irritants, rub it on their hands before going to work.

He said all skin eruptions in the plant caused by contact with lubricating oils cleared, and so did 75 per cent of those caused by cutting oils and 88 per cent of those caused by some other industrial chemicals.

Among chemicals, silicone is the champion anti-rust. It repels other substances so powerfully that, under the microscope, invaders can be seen being bounced away as they approach. It is a distant relative, chemically, of glass.

The psychic or mental influence over the body also was mentioned by Drs. Robert R. J. Hiller, Paul S. Rhoads, and Carl E. Billings of Northwestern University Medical School, Chicago, in describing their treatment of over 100 persons suffering from hypertension high blood pressure with either hydralazine, hexamethonium, or both.

The former they said was "moderately effective" and the percentage of side effects was high but they usually didn't last long. Hexamethonium was powerful and unpredictable. It shot down blood pressure all right, sometimes, so rapidly it was dangerous.

PRINCIPLES OF CHRISTIAN STEWARDSHIP

II Corinthians 9:1-15
God's Word has much to say on the subject of Christian stewardship. Stewardship implies a trust committed to one's care. A steward is a person who has been entrusted with the management of the affairs of another. Stewards occupy a position of trust, of responsibility, of influence, and of much honor. The reasonable expectation is that stewards will be faithful to their trust.

It is required in stewards that a man be found faithful. Faithfulness is a requisite for any service, but especially for one involving stewardship, the care of what belongs to another. Every Christian is a steward, whether he realizes it or not, and as such will have to render an account to God for the things which He has entrusted to his care.

I. The Readiness Of The Givers. II Corinthians 9:1-5.

In writing to the Corinthians Paul set forth the fact, the nature, the privilege, and the rewards of genuine Christian stewardship. In chapters eight and nine of this Epistle, Paul mentioned giving in reference to a collection for the poor saints at Jerusalem. As Paul went about raising money to assist these poor saints, he sought to stimulate the Macedonians to liberality by the example of the Corinthians, and to stimulate the Corinthians to generosity by the example of the Macedonians. In this regard the Macedonian believers had set a worthy example for the Corinthians. They had first given themselves unto the Lord and that naturally made the matter of giving their temporal means much easier. Their liberal giving was an expression of their love for Christ and their devotion to Him.

It seems that in making his appeal to the Macedonians that Paul had spoken of the response which the Corinthians had made. However, it appears that thus far their response was largely in terms of promises. Even though they were ready at one time to give to the point of sacrifice, Paul realized that they might not continue to be in that spirit. Since he was about to visit them, accompanied by some of the Macedonians, the Apostle reminded them again of their duty in the matter of giving and urged them to have their gifts ready when he and his party arrived. He was greatly concerned that his confidence in them and the generosity, which he had already expressed freely, would be fully justified by their advance provision of a liberal offering. Paul did not want his boasting of the liberality of the Corinthians to be nullified by their failure to pay their pledges. Most assuredly would have been embarrassing to him and to the Corinthians if, when Paul and some of the Macedonians arrived in their midst, their gifts were not ready, but still had to be collected.

II. The Rules For Giving. II Corinthians 9:6-9.
In teaching the Corinthian Christians how they should support the work of the Lord, Paul likened the method of Christian giving to a farmer sowing his seed. If the farmer sows little, he can only expect to receive a little in return. On the other hand, if he sows much, he may rightfully expect to receive much in return.

1. God's children should give generously.
The more God's children give to Him the more abundantly He will bless them. If any Christian expects to enjoy God's favor and blessing by all means he must be faithful in the realm of stewardship. If we want an abundant harvest of spiritual blessings from our Christian stewardship, we must sow bountifully. Ever remember that it is an absolute certainty that no one can ever out-give God.

2. God's children should give purposefully.
God would have Christians to give liberally and systematically. Christian giving should never be a hit-or-miss proposition. Giving certainly should be universal among Christians—every Christian man. Not a one excluded from this privilege. In all probability no two will have an equal amount to give but none should be deprived of the privilege or

3. God's children should give cheerfully.
There is no joy in giving if it is done grudgingly. The Christian who gives grudgingly is like a man who gives a gift with a grudging manner. They should give in such a way that they would never regret their gifts as though they had been wrung from them. Giving should be spontaneous and hilarious. "God loveth a cheerful giver." The Greek word, which is translated "cheerful," is the one from which we get the word "hilarious."

God delights in believers who love Him and His work to such an extent that they constantly strive to see how much they can give to His cause rather than how little. When done in the right spirit and for the right motive, this experience of Christian giving is one of the happiest of all those in the Christian life.

God is calling on His children to give generously, purposefully and cheerfully to the cause of Christ and for the propagation of the gospel. No Christian will ever regret being faithful to the Lord in his stewardship. On the other hand, any Christian who withholds the Lord's from Him will discover that his soul has shriveled as his means have increased, and that the work of the Lord has suffered accordingly. There is a real joy that comes from giving to the Lord which many Christians have never experienced.

III. The Results Of Giving. II Corinthians 9:10-15.
Scriptural giving brings a Christian into a closer fellowship with God. No child of God ever regrets being honest with and faithful to Him in financial matters. In numerous and unanticipated ways the Lord will reward every faithful and earnest steward.

Scriptural giving provides the means needed for carrying on the work of the Lord. It brings down the divine blessing in such a way that one's capacity to give is enlarged. As one expressed it, "The more I give the more I have to give." Christian giving also stimulates thanksgiving to God.

While urging upon his readers the great duty of Christian liberality, Paul thought of the insignificant character of all human giving when compared with the marvelous and boundless grace of God in giving the Son of His love to be our Saviour, and he exclaimed: "perceive how much God has done for us." "Unspokeable" literally means "not yet fully expounded." And we know that the Lord Jesus Christ has never been fully expounded.

Administration
Is Revising
Revenue Dept.

By RICHARD E. MOONEY

WASHINGTON, D. C. (UP)—The Republicans never were very happy about the first reorganization, because they felt that too many underperforming Democrats have been frozen in top tax jobs with Civil Service protection. Now they are moving that problem with a reshuffle of their own.

In brief, the reorganization "consolidates the nation's 17 tax collection districts into nine, wiping out district headquarters in 11 cities, retaining them in six and opening new offices in three. Out of a job as a result of the reorganization was John B. Dunlap, who was commissioner of the Revenue Bureau during the Truman administration. Just before the Democrats left office Dunlap stepped down to take a Civil Service post as head of the Texas-Oklahoma District.

Besides giving the Republicans an opportunity to root out some Democratic appointees, the new setup is expected to save money. Treasury Secretary George M. Humphrey said it will eventually save $6,000,000 a year, will cut out 1,300 tax jobs, and "should" mean an increase in federal tax collections.

To boost collections, Humphrey announced plans for "more enforcement" by shifting bureau personnel from unnecessary posts to jobs where they can check tax returns for accuracy.

Top Robert W. Kean (R-N.J.), head of the House Subcommittee investigating tax scandals, said there were "too many generals" in former President Truman's 17-district program. He expressed "thorough" approval of the new plan to put more agents to work checking returns.

Sen. John J. William (R-Del.), a frequent critic of the bureau, also expressed gratification at the reorganization.

The new organization goes into effect July 1.

Cities in which district headquarters will be closed are: Buffalo, N. Y., Baltimore, Cleveland, Detroit, Louisville, Birmingham, Ala., St. Louis, St. Paul, Denver, Los Angeles and Seattle.

Present district headquarters will be continued at Atlanta, Boston, Chicago, Dallas, New York and Philadelphia. New headquarters will be opened at Cincinnati, Omaha and San Francisco.

Corlison Treatment Will Prevent Injury To Rheumatic Heart

By LELOS SMITH

United Press Science Editor
NEW YORK, N. Y. (UP) — Large doses of the hormone cortisone, given to children soon after their first attack of rheumatic fever, will prevent apparent heart damage, two groups of medical scientists told the annual meeting of the American Rheumatism Association today.

Drs. Lawrence Greenman, F. A. Weiland, and T. S. Danowski of the Pittsburgh Children's Hospital said that 90 per cent of children tested who had but one attack of rheumatic fever which lasted less than two weeks recovered fully with cortisone injections.

Of the one-attack children who had rheumatic fever from two to six weeks, 88 per cent recovered without evident heart damage. But when the duration was stretched to more than six weeks before the cortisone treatment began, only 7 per cent recovered from the fever without damaged hearts.

Dr. Greenman said 90 children were studied in all. He and his associates had also treated rheumatic fever children with the hormone ACTH, but the number was too small to be indicative. Of the two who had rheumatic fever from two to six weeks, the heart of one was returned to normal.

Three patients who had the disease more than six weeks failed to respond.

Dr. Mary G. Wilson, speaking for herself and four associates in the department of pediatrics, Cornell University Medical School, said the early administration of cortisone or ACTH "favorably alters the natural course of active rheumatic fever by arresting the inflammatory process before there is any irreversible damage to the heart."

Her group worked with 23 children whom they treated with the hormones for an average of seven days. She said "in the majority of patients there was termination of the attack with reversal of chamber enlargement of the heart and a return of the normal heart reserve without overt clinical evidence of increased heart damage."

These were positive reports to the rheumatism and arthritis specialists on the "wonder" hormones. A negative one was made by Dr. A. Bradford Hill and Dr. J. H. Kellgren of England, who said they had found aspirin just as effective as cortisone in treating rheumatoid arthritis in the early stages.

WORKED TOO WELL
SAN DIEGO, Calif. June 5 (UP) — Lawrence Baker, 14, imitating a hypnotist he had seen on television, put his playmate, Nancy Fogarty, into a trance—then couldn't bring her out of it.

"I didn't think I could do it," young Baker said Thursday when sheriff's deputies in nearby Spring Valley reached the girl's home and found her lying on the sofa with her eyes open, unable to talk or move.

The girl was finally roused by the family doctor.

Administration
Is Revising
Revenue Dept.

By RICHARD E. MOONEY

WASHINGTON, D. C. (U.P.)—The Republicans were very happy about the first reorganization, because they felt that too many undeserving Democrats have been frozen in top tax jobs with Civil Service protection.

Now they are solving that problem with a reshuffle of their own.

In brief, the "re-reorganization" consolidates the nation's 17 tax collection districts into nine, wiping out district headquarters in 11 cities, retaining them in six, and opening new offices in three.

Out of a job as a result of the re-districting was John B. Dunlap, who was commissioner of the Revenue Bureau during the Truman administration. Just before the Democrats left office Dunlap stepped down to take a Civil Service post as head of the Texas-Oklahoma District.

Besides giving the Republicans an opportunity to root out some Democratic appointees, the new setup is expected to save money.

Treasury Secretary George M. Humphrey said it will eventually save $6,000,000 a year, will cut out 1,300 tax jobs, and "should" mean an increase in federal tax collections.

To boost collections, Humphrey announced plans for "more enforcement" by shifting bureau personnel from unnecessary posts to spots where they can check tax returns for accuracy.

Rep. Robert W. Kean (R-N.J.), head of the House Subcommittee investigating tax scandals, said there were "too many generals" in former President Truman's 17-district program. He expressed "thorough" approval of the new plan to put more agents to work checking returns.

Sen. John A. William (R-Del.), a frequent critic of the bureau, also expressed gratification at the reorganization.

The new organization goes into effect July 1.

Cities in which district headquarters will be closed are: Buffalo, N. Y.; Baltimore, Cleveland, Detroit, Louisville, Birmingham, Ala.; St. Louis, St. Paul, Denver, Los Angeles, and Seattle.

Present district headquarters will be continued at Alaska, Boston, Chicago, Dallas, New York, and Philadelphia. New headquarters will be opened at Cincinnati, Kansas City, and San Francisco.

4-H Club Week
Program Planned

Governor Lawrence Wetherby will be the principal speaker at the 30th annual 4-H Club Week to be held at the University of Kentucky June 9 to 13. He will address the assembly of approximately 1,200 boys and girls, county agricultural and home agents, club leaders and others on Thursday morning.

Other speakers of the four-day convention include Dean Frank J. Welch of the College of Agriculture and Home Economics; Dr. Lyman Ginger of the College of Education; Dr. Glenn C. Dilline of the 4-H Club Foundation in Wall ington, and Everett Mitchell, National Broadcasting Company.

Four-Hers also will have an important part in the program. Girls will give demonstrations in various phases of home economics and engage in the judging of canning, foods, home improvement and clothing, while the boys will complete in demonstrations in agriculture and water management.

Presiding at the morning sessions will be: President Howard Ragland, Lafue county; Vice President Buford Cobb, Jr., Henry county; and Secretary Annette Allen, Fayette county. Vesper services will be conducted by four different club members each evening.

Other highlights of the week include the state-wide style fiasco, swimming in the pool at the Memorial Coliseum, an evening party, a picnic and tour of University Farm and the Parade of Champions—closing with the impressive

He's Done Something for Himself!

Only a few short minutes ago, the man you see in the picture above was handed the golden keys to his 1953 Cadillac—and now he's off on that first delightful journey behind the wheel.

And as he leans back against the deep, soft cushion, and looks out over that proud hood into the roadway beyond . . . well, he knows that he's done something for himself!

He knows it just from the way he feels there in the driver's seat—relaxed, and at peace with the world . . . completely confident that he has made the wisest possible choice of a motor car.

He senses it in the marvelous way the car handles and drives and rides . . . so effortless and smooth and quiet that it's a joy and an inspiration just to hold the wheel in his hands.

And he knows it, too, from the feeling of pride and satisfaction he enjoys as he looks forward to the delight of his family and the approval of his acquaintances and friends.

And how the miles and the years will bear him out in his conviction!

Let him arrive at a distinguished hotel . . . or an exclusive club . . . and he will find that his Cadillac constitutes the perfect "letter of introduction."

In fact, let him travel wherever he will in this broad land of ours . . . and he will find his Cadillac a trustworthy and unfailing companion, an inspiration to trust and drive, a valued contributor to a magnificent way of life.

Yes, you're looking at a man who's done something wonderful for himself—wonderful beyond even his fondest dreams.

And if you think it's time you did something for yourself, then we suggest you come in and see us.

Let's make it "Cadillac time" for you!

Cruise with Death

CHAPTER TWENTY-FIVE
BROWN read the sheet of blue paper, looked up, read it again, cleared his throat—a sure sign that what he had to say was going to be difficult.

"Mrs. Redding... Miss Walton..." He looked from one to the other. "We must all try to be brave."

Carlotta closed her eyes for a moment, then faced him steadily. "Read it to us," she demanded.

Brown still hesitated.

"I think you may as well," said Randall.

Brown cleared his throat again. The note was brief.

"I just can't face it, the police and all. Of course I did it. He threatened to expose me, made me poor. I was afraid of that. I had a gun and threw it overboard afterwards. But Todd saw it. I was handing the will when the captain caught me, and I had to get away. I didn't mean to hurt him. By the time you read this, I will be over the side. Now you know everything, and you can go home. Good-bye."

Laurence O. Redding.

Gay moaned.

"Oh no, it can't be true. He hasn't... he wouldn't... You will have to find him..."

She half rose from her chair, her hand at her throat, her eyes staring blindly. Then she pitched forward. There were no hittrons this time. She had fainted.

After Gay had been revived and Dr. Randolph and Macbeth had taken her to her cabin, Lisa, Brown, Carlotta, and I sat on numbly. Todd had disappeared. This new disaster forced us into a coalescence of misery, and nobody felt like breaking away.

I had asked Brown to let me see Larry's note, and I sat reading it over and over. The more I read it, the more I thought that there was something very queer about it, and at last I decided to speak up.

"Did you notice he spoke of throwing his gun overboard? Yet, Mr. Brown, you said you found a gun on the deck and pitched it over yourself."

"Poor Larry must have forgotten that," Carlotta murmured. "He wasn't very bright."

"What do you make of it?" I asked.

Brown looked at me gravely. "It could mean that Redding was making a false confession. It could mean that the real murderer was still on board."

Carlotta appeared suddenly to remember that she was the widow. She gave a choking sob, pressed her handkerchief to her eyes. "I can't bear to think of him," she said, as she groped her way out of the room.

Lisa Tremaine looked as though her disapproval of everything and everybody had reached a point which was inexplicable.

"I shall take a bit of a lie-down," she said. "We might ask that doctor for sleeping pills all around. I am sure he has plenty."

I couldn't talk any more. It seemed to me that the time had come for me to go into action. I left her there with Brown, and made my way to the promenade deck.

One question kept churning around in my mind. Why had Todd appeared so terrified when he discovered that Larry had jumped overboard? It had seemed to suck the courage and the cockiness right out of him, and he was like a different person when he came back from his unsuccessful search.

When I stepped outside, I noticed that the ship had slowed down so much that it could barely be held into the waves. Although the storm itself was over, the sea was still so disturbed that only a sea gull could have been happy on the spray-washed decks. I made my way to the bridge, and found it in charge of a sulky Hezlewood, who informed me that the captain was personally conducting the party sporting over the Sports for Mr. Redding. That was all he could tell me, nor would he comment on it, or on anything else.

I went on down to deck B, intending to go as far as the hold if I had to.

In the little writing room, I saw Brown, sitting alone, and he got up and came toward me. He wanted me to know, he said, that he was convinced of Todd's innocence as I was, and that he would do anything he could to help me. I asked him what he thought he could do, and he said, frankly nothing, at the moment, but he was sure it would work out.

I left him, and went down to deck C. The ship was turning slowly. Evidently the search on board for poor Larry had been unsuccessful, and now the formality of looking for him in the troubled water must be carried out. If he had jumped during the storm, as we supposed, there was a sheer waste of effort. The wide and aimless circling added the last touch of horror to the heavy afternoon.

I crossed the afterwell deck, and went in to the "black gang" quarters under the poop. I was aware of a large, semicircular space with berths around it, and from the berths the faintest of several sets of white teeth. I held the door open, and felt my heart knocking.

"Can anyone tell me the way to the brig?" There was no need to tell them why I wanted it. I felt sure that by the grapevine they knew.

A wizened little fellow, whom I had never seen before, shuffled forward and offered to guide me. I followed him gladly.

He led me to one of the heaviest steel doors I ever saw. The ring was terrible, and what with that and the closeness of the air, and the worry at what might be happening to Robert behind that awful door, I felt myself becoming seasick. I gulped my way back up the ladder, and out into the fresh air before the dining salon. There I bumped into Todd.

Agreeability at all costs seemed to be his new role, for he twisted his ratty face into a smile.

"Maggie and me was wondering, m'lady, would you join us in a cup of tea? You being American and all that."

I hesitated, feeling more miserable than I can ever remember being before or since, but I accepted. We went into the salon, and Todd, who moved stealthily no more, but rather like a mouse, opened the panel. Through it I saw Macbeth in the galley take off a steaming kettle and fill a brown earthenware teapot on a tray already laid. She pushed it through to Todd, then came around and plumped down complacently at the blond mahogany table.

"This is homey, I must say," Macbeth remarked to us.

She was on her third strong cup before she began to tell me why they had invited me. She gave me a smile as gratifying as a mouse-trap.

"Tammie and me was thinking, m'lady, you knew more than you was telling."

A shiver of apprehension ran over me. "What makes you think so?"

"Well now, you heard the poor master talking at the night he was done in, and you ran up the first lady on deck afterwards. Then Tammie saw you under the window of that she-devil, excuse the word, Mrs. Redding. We thought you might be snooping, like."

"I don't snoop," I said, with a frozen dignity. "I don't know anything. I wish I did."

Todd was searching my face with his shifty eyes. "No offense meant, I'm sure. We've all got a duty to snoop, and see justice done."

"I want to find the murderer," I said. "I've got to find him."

"That's just it!" Macbeth exclaimed triumphantly.

Todd leaned forward insinuatingly.

"We don't think it was his lordship. I can tell you that. Suppose I was to tell you that I could get him out? Suppose I knew where the key was kept, and suppose I had a duplicate for me and Maggie, just in case."

"I will be grateful if you can help me," I said.

"It might cost a good deal of money," Todd said.

With all my heart I wanted to give him a poke in the jaw, but Robert would have been proud of the way I controlled myself.

"I have no money, as you very well know. But I have a diamond pin. It is the only jewelry they would let me take out except my engagement ring. If you will really get him out and bring him to me safely I will give you..."

"It's a deal," Todd said, and winked at me.

I declined a second cup of tea abruptly, and made for the door. They were still drinking when I left them.

Number of US Reds Down From 80,000 To 20,000, Says Former Investigator

SAVANNAH, Ga. (UPI) — Former Rep. John S. Wood said today that partly as a result of work done by the House Un-American Activities Committee he headed, Communists have decreased in number from more than 80,000 to about 20,000 in the United States in five years.

Wood said that in addition to the primary duty of reporting to Congress on Communist activities, the committee "has done a patriotic service of inestimable value in alerting the people as to what Communism and Communists really are, how they operate and how we can resist their inroads."

Wood said in an address before the Georgia Ear Association that while a member of the Un-American Activities Committee he refrained from discussing its work in public but that "now I am glad to speak out frankly."

"It is no longer subject to debate that our national security is threatened by the world-wide Communist conspiracy," Wood said. "It seeks to poison every phase of our life."

He said that there is still much work to be done on Communist control in the United States "because the American people generally know very little about how the Communist party operates. The theory of Communism may be summed up in a single phrase—abolition of private property."

Wood said the movement "always has been, and now will be, should not alter our resolve to adopt an aggressive and militant policy toward the Communist party."

He said the "encouraging signs of progress" against Communism "should not alter our resolve to adopt an aggressive and militant policy toward the Communist party."

He said he knows of a Pittsburgh, Pa., labor union composed of "2,800 'loyal American members'" but which was "invaded by a Communist party infiltration group and soon completely dominated by these intruders."

Wood said that he learned from the many witnesses who appeared before his committee that one or more of ten factors usually contribute to the "making of a Communist."

He said these factors included promises of personal advancement, "misguided reliance" on the Communist claim of being the workers' champion; attraction to Communism's offer of a "one-package" solution to the world's ills; personal hardships; lack of faith in the democratic system; participation in Communist front groups; influence on students by Red college teachers; and influence of prominent persons who sometimes innocently are led into the Communist cause.

STEER-FOOTED

SPRINGFIELD, O. (UPI)—After shooting an 800-pound black steer that had been on the loose for several days, a Springfield policeman summed up the chase, saying, "It was just like hunting deer." The huge animal had lost much weight during its period of freedom and gained in speed.

LION SHALL LIE... WITH LAMB

THIS ISN'T quite like "And the lion shall lie down with the lamb" as the Bible reads, but it's close as 4-day-old Bambi, whitetail deer in New York's Bronx zoo, nuzzles 2-day-old tiger cubs held by Mrs. Helen Martin, custodian of the nursery. At that age they exchange greetings without thinking of meals.

Three-D Radio Is Next In World Of Gadgetry

By ALINE MOSBY

United Press Hollywood Writer HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — It was bound to happen dept: How you can get 3-D radio.

The three dimension craze has the country flooded with polaroid classes, and everything from ping pong balls to bodies fall out of movie screens. Even television stuck its toe in the 3-D pond with a demonstration on the home screens.

Now radio, too, can offer entertainment that "makes you feel as if you are actually participating in it."

A radio station in Pasadena this week unveiled two demonstrations in "three-dimensional or stereophonic sound."

For this the listener at home needed extra equipment, namely, two radio sets.

On one side of the room the listener set up a set tuned to the station. On the other side, ten feet away, according to directions sent out by the broadcasting company, the listener placed a second set tuned to another station using FM, or a frequency modulation band.

At the broadcasting studio, a choral group sang into two microphones—one on the left side of the room for the regular AM station, and one on the right for the FM station.

"It's the equivalent of one microphone for the right ear and one for the left," said station manager Bill Beaton. "You actually get a depth perception."

"You can't find that on what he said was 'flat' one-set radio."

"It's as if you were actually present at the concert," he explained in the fashion of 3-D and cinema movie-makers. "If you heard a football game this way, you'd think you were on the one-yard line of the field."

Besides the chorus, the program featured specially recorded sound effects and orchestral numbers. There were no roller-coaster rides or lions jumping out of the radio sets.

A baroque house in Hollywood, noting the currently popular "this is cinema" wide-screen film, changed its sign over the strippers' photos to read, "this is sinerama."

But, then, as comic Fred Allen says, "I think I'll wait for color radio."
